TO THE PUBLICK:

NDER the Auſpices of the Junior Claſs of Barnard College, we preſent to our worthy Friends, Patrons, and the polite Publick, our Mortarboard.

This Book repreſents the Labor of many Years and the Experience of more; our main Purpoſe throughout the Book having been to give to our Publick a chronological Depiction of the hiſtorical Occurrences and Events of the College not in the formal Faſhion of the Paſt which has ſo often miſled the riſing Generations but more as they actually took place, combining Accuracy of Detail with the Flavour of human Intereſt peculiar to them. To accompliſh this without ſuſtaining a Loſs of Dignity in the principal Actors, the Publick may be aſſured has not been eaſy.

With this Apology your Editors ſubmit their Work to the Publick paraphraſing a great Man's Words, in that, if they can not pleaſe all of the People all of the Time, they know that they can pleaſe part of the People moſt of the Time, and hope to pleaſe ſome of the People for all Time.

Minding the Faculty's P's and Q's

W. A. Braun

PROFESSOR BRAUN

At last, we have inside information based on concrete facts. Who would guess Professor Braun to be a great lover of practical jokes and children? Freshmen need no longer shiver and shake at his stern countenance—his capitals may reassure them.

J. Pauline Young

MISS YOUNG

Aha! Behind a mask of sociability, Miss Young hides a nature of great secretiveness—her "o's" betray her. And the "y" denotes aggressiveness pure and simple. We strongly advise taking the original quiz as makeups are worse.

Charles Knapp

PROFESSOR KNAPP

His perseverance is shown in the pointed tops of the thirteenth and fourteenth letters of the alphabet. Soon C. C.-54 will know every building and byway of the Roman Forum. Also, he has succeeded through perseverance and large capitals to persuade us of his poetic turn of mind.

Minding the Faculty's P's and Q's

MISS DORADO

Tall capitals denote a high imagination—so maybe those irregular verbs are the children of her brain. Dots high and to the right express curiosity and inquisitiveness. Perhaps if you persuade her to change her manner of dotting quizzes might occur less frequently. No harm trying.

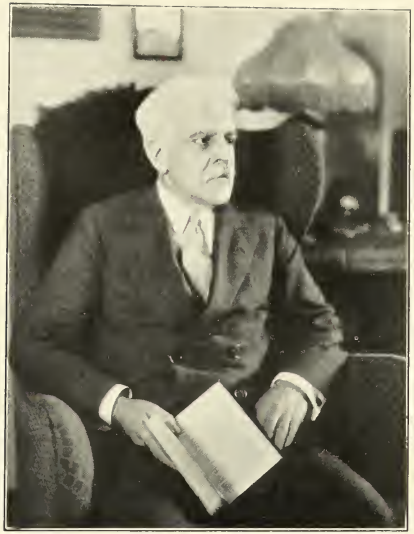
MR. MOLEY

Please note carefully the formation of the "d" in Professor Moley's signature. We must confess we little dreamed it, but facts are facts—he has a love of pleasure and outdoor sports.

MISS STURTEVANT

A fatalist—this is indicated by her abrupt ending of words. Do not worry too much about pre-ordained marks, for the shading of the writing shows a high sense of honor. You will get what you deserve, we hope.

FACULTY



The Faculty and Students of Barnard College record their sorrow at the loss of

HERBERT MAULE RICHARDS

who was in the service of the College for thirty years, and Professor of Botany for the past twenty-two years. He was one of that group who created the high scholarly standards of the College during its early years and maintained them constantly. A distinguished scientist, he contributed greatly to the academic reputation of the Faculty. As a teacher he was exceptionally gifted, communicating to his students an intense interest in science and winning their loyal and lasting attachment, as the long history of the Barnard Botanical Club so strikingly shows. His outstanding ability, his intellectual honesty and sincerity, his wide and varied culture, won the cordial regard of all who knew him.

Every student in Barnard is a member of the self-governing body called the Undergraduate Association. The Representative Assembly, which is composed of the leaders of the various college activities and members especially elected to it by the college, acts in a legislative capacity for the Association. Student Council is the Association's executive body and Honor Board constitutes the judiciary. Certain appointed committees have more specialized duties, as those of Eligibility and Curriculum. Thus through these various channels the supervision of the Undergraduate Association reaches every part of student activity.

Always remember that I thought of something to write in your book for half an hour when I should have been studying. It is the proof of true

Love,

Betty

GREEK GAMES
E. T.

E.F.FOLEY

The starving Athenians have sent their leader, Hagnon, to beg food from the people of Thebes, who are hostile to them. Led by maidens who bear the last morsel of food,—an offering to the God,—they flock despairingly to the temple of Hermes to pray for their leader's success. In the midst of the sorrowful petitions Hagnon enters, triumphant. From his chariot he scatters grain among the people, who are jubilant now that the famine is past.

Suddenly a woman carrying a limp little body bursts in upon the merriment and charges Hagnon with having crushed her child beneath his chariot. She turns then and implores vengeance of Hermes, the kind and just protector of travelers. The mob divides: part gather in sympathy at the side of the woman,—the rest continue carousing with Hagnon. The leader, frenzied with wine, hurls his goblet at his accuser. An ominous sound issues from the temple and Hagnon falls dead. There is a silence. Two priestesses enter and a song of divine will rises from within the temple. The multitude, taking up the chorus in submission, bear away the body of the leader.

DANCE OF THE CLASS OF 1929

It is the entrance to the Underworld. Little imps dance about merrily, not paying the slightest attention to Charon, who tries to make them behave. Soon Hermes appears, accompanied by shades, bringing with them people from the world. Charon exacts a toll from each of the newcomers. One young man, reluctant, lingers on the bank, pleading with Hermes to allow him to return to his beloved. Hermes takes his leave. While the imps are teasing the people, the young man, thinking himself unnoticed, hides. Meanwhile Hermes has returned, leading a young girl, who, as soon as the God disappears, rushes past Charon and searches for her lover in the group vexed by the antics of the imps. Charon will not aid her in her search, but drives the imps and the people farther on their journey, leaving only the shades at the entrance. The young man, observing the departure of the others, leaves his hiding place and sees his beloved. They leap into a wild and exultant dance of love. Then, at last, they are willing to be led to their eternal home.

DIRGE

(Prayer of a lover to Hermes)

The wind has drawn its fingers through the trees,
And rippled running whispers on its breath . . .
But god of roadways leading down to death,
O what have she and I to do with these?

The tender leaves will bring no song to me,—
For she will never lift her eyes again
Beneath the clouds and shiver of the rain
To watch the myrtle bloom in Thessaly.

My pulses will forget to greet the red
Of sunrise or the drops of laughing wine,—
For hands that trembled yesterday in mine
Stretch blindly out among the voiceless dead.

I showed her where the rich blue oceans press,
And how the breakers of the tide begin—
O Hermes, be to her as I have been
And guide her in the strange first-loneliness.

Greek Games

As Vanity Fair Saw It:

An incredibly lovely bit of Greece at Barnard. We might almost have been on the hillside of the vale of Tempe; the muffled roar of Broadway magically changed into the sweet churning of the river Peneus. Hushed spectators in an amphi-theatrical circle watching a Hellenic pageant of restrained beauty, cool, remote beauty flavored with the serenity of a serene people. A hushed, breath-taking silence.

And suddenly the sounds of faint music twanged from the lyre of Apollo, music that bore with it the essence of Parnassus, sung by a band of priestesses. We thought for a fleeting second that they were a frieze lifted from the temple of the Caryatids. Slender, white slips of girls, crowned with fresh laurel wreaths, swaying to the music of Dionysus, drunk with the detached worship of the devotee. As the priestesses paused a mob of revelers swept into the circle. We were at Eleusis then, at the mad Eleusinean mysteries prostrating ourselves with abandon, bowing before the purple God of Wine. A swift denouement. A lyric, tense exit.

And we were at a dance festival. The Bacchae, clad in purple chiffon, answering the call of Bacchus, transported into a religious ecstasy, bending, swaying, leaping, as the rites grew madder. Then youths and maidens, exponents of Terpsichore, dancing in rhythmic beauty, true sons and daughters of Greece. About it all a flavor that was intensely convincing.

A vivid athletic contest, too. The discus throwers, reminiscent of Phidian heroes. The flaming torch race, the mad gasping haste of the hoop contest while the round wooden stave wavered breath takingly at the corners. The sculptured tranquillity of the chariot entrance, the last burst of silver and gold. Barnard had caught the spirit of Greece.

Greek Games

As We Saw It:

Will we never get that entrance right? The costumes are a farce. Of course it isn't the fault of the costume committee—how can you expect dyed cheesecloth to look like sheer chiffon and classical drapes. The wasted hours in that dye room—I flunked my Classical Civ. quiz in Greek houses and dress because I didn't have time to study and I depended on the costumes we were doing here! And this orange powder that they put on us for the final rehearsal. We look more like South Sea Islanders than bronzed heroes. Will you gaze at that priestess? If I were Dionysus I'd make her revel—to get thin. She'd desecrate a temple not adorn it.

By the holy muses, and by the grace of Terpsichore, this dance is awful. I was a saucy imp last year, and I almost broke my back learning to do somersaults in the air, but that was easy compared to this abandon business. It was more natural to be imbecilic. I've gone around for the last month trying to act like a reveler but I look like the night before exams. The only mob madness I've ever experienced has been in the subway; I've "become Bacchus" in the rush hours.

Athletics may look aesthetic, but we certainly feel anything but that. My nerves are shattered to pieces after throwing the discus, and whatever heart action I had stops completely when the hoop wavers at the corners. My palms have been blistered for weeks from practice. And I shall never forget how we messed about with those wooden chariots to make them look like something, nor how we tried to make the charioteer really seem dressed in cloth of gold and silver.

Well, here's hoping that the audience has a good time, and that I don't get another splinter in my foot walking around barefoot!

Sophomore Year — Entrance of Class 1929

In disobedience to the mandates of the king of Argos, a group of revellers determine to pay homage to Dionysus. Into the forest they bear sacrifices of grapes and wine concealed under cloaks and tunics. They place their offerings on a shrine and begin their worship of the god. Word reaches the king that his commands are disobeyed—so with a body-guard of soldiers and a large group of indignant citizens, he hastens to the forest. As the revellers perceive him coming, their rites become more rapid, and the worshippers surround the king, soldiers, and citizens, and throw leaves and grapes to them, and invite them to join the festivities. The citizens are caught in the spell of the mystic rites, and little by little are swayed to the side of the revellers. The soldiers sympathize with the revellers, but they remember their loyalty to the king. The king himself remains aloof, having tried in vain to stop the conversion of the citizens. Suddenly he breaks through the surrounding group of soldiers, and, rushing up to the altar, sweeps the sacrifice to the ground. The worshippers gasp at the sacrilege. Even the soldiers draw back at this terrible insult to the god. The king turns and looks disdainfully at the mob, then, sensing their anger, he retreats slowly and with great dignity. The citizens, too much in awe of their king to do him violence, slowly press him from them into exile.

ENTRANCE OF THE CLASS OF 1929

After the exile of the king, one of the few remaining loyal citizens, an old man, in an attempt to prevent the Bacchae from continuing their worship of Dionysus, has stolen grapes from the vineyard sacred to his honor. The wine god, in his anger at this sacrilegious theft, has sent a blight upon all the surrounding vineyards—and there is sadness throughout the land.

A group of Bacchae, young maidens still faithful to their god, slowly make their way to the lonely temple, and vainly attempt to render their usual offerings. Bowed down with grief and suffering, they place themselves before the altar and plead for the return of the god's favor and the fertility of the vine. But racked with anguish and the hopelessness of their pleadings, they fall, limp, one by one, before the sacred altar—and only silence echoes from the temple walls.

An old bent figure approaches, carrying a huge basket of scarfs, strangely dressed—apparently a peddler of some other land. With vague mutterings and weary progress, he passes by the temple. A group of village youths, in search of amusement amongst all the existing sorrow and desolation, sighting the strange old peddler, pounce upon him and divert themselves in teasing him and flaunting his wares, all unaware of the nearness of the temple and the presence of the Bacchae. In the midst of the noise and confusion a strange thing happens. The basket of scarfs is accidentally overturned and there lie revealed—the sacred grapes. The old man cringes, the youths draw back in awe and the Bacchae, aroused by the commotion, draw forward, unbelieving. They gather up the precious grapes, and reverently bear them to the altar.

The spell is broken: the thief has been found, the blight would now be lifted—and happiness would reign again! The Bacchae turn, dash back into the midst of the youths, rejoicing, and enter with them into a wild dance of joy and abandon.

SONG TO DIONYSUS

Of a Mother Whose Child Is Marked for the Evening Sacrifices

The little grapes have grown to purple-red,
The damask rose is purple in the sun,
And thy high altars of Mount Cithaeron
Are hallowed.

Thine are the vernal arbors, girdled thrice,
The glory of the autumn grain is thine.
What need hast thou of any praise of mine,
Or sacrifice?

Out where the wind has voices,—on the hill,
I danced, as maiden, to thy hot desire
And loosed my hair for thee. O, must the fire
Be calling still?

Calling for all I love. . . . The holiest thing
Is mine to give upon the eventide . . .
Yet with the pulse of tears beneath my side
I cannot sing.

So take thy dead, and let there be for me
Only the lyric sorrow I have known.
As warm spray beats against the weary stone
Unwearily.

Archery

Archery has become a very popular sport at Barnard, if the full-to-capacity classes are any criterion. Unfortunately, a great many "good shots" seem to suffer from acute bashfulness, so that scarcely enough people participate in the tournaments to make it worth while. This was true in lesser degree last fall, thus making the contest more interesting. Archery is essentially a competitive sport and until enthusiasts are willing to put aside their modesty and fear and vie for places in the tournament with the same desire they show in trying for teams in other sports, archery will never achieve the heights to which basketball, baseball and swimming have already attained at Barnard.

A senior, Jan Smith, won first place in last Fall's tournament; Mary Clark, '29, and Helen Roth, '29, tied for second; Beryl Finch, '29, took third. These four girls, along with Dorothy Fogel and Evelyn Atkinson, participated in the Novelty Event, subsequently held on Field Day. The Novelty Event consisted of aiming at a target made of vari-colored balloons, and proved to be an exciting and noisy contest.

Tenikoit, 1927-1928

Tenikoit begins its season in the Fall with an open doubles and singles tournament. This year, due to poor weather, only the singles tournament was completed, being won by Louise Schaad, '28.

A. A. Banquet

MAY 6, 1927

As near as possible to the hour of six on Friday, May sixth, the Physical Education Staff, the members of ye famous baseball team and the A. A. Board gathered around the head table in the Gym. At the four other tables were the followers of the Red, Blue, Green and Gold.

Gertrude Braun, the toastmistress, first introduced Miss Wayman, who had just returned from her western trip, and who spoke of the advantages of intramural sports.

Margaret Irish, an alumna who had spent a year in Europe, then told of the different attitude that Europeans hold toward sports.

Professor Earle performed the very solemn ceremony of presenting bats, candy filled, to the members of his unbeaten team.

Frances Gedroice, retiring president of A. A., awarded the athletic emblems earned during the year. This was the first time that the 2,000-point blazers had been awarded and they were won by Margery Meyers and Frances Gedroice.

Miss Wayman next presented Frances Gedroice with the plaque for the best all-round athlete and Margaret Goodell bestowed the non-athletic awards.

The Freshman waitresses, dressed as athletes of bygone days, gave everyone a good laugh with the baseball game done in pantomime.

Vera Freudenheim clogged and Mr. Savelle proved that a ball player can also be a singer by giving some greatly appreciated solos. The entertainment was ended with the big hit of Junior Show, the washwomen's chorus.

Hoboes Ball

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1927

Everything but the cider was old. The once honored Barnardites, aged rapidly from overwork, were heavily bearded and toothless.

There were bums in long skirts and short skirts, in baggy trousers and skimpy trousers, in tatters and patches, with red noses and smeared faces, Greeks, Turks, and Americans,—they were all bums. The doughnuts, pickles, apples and the above-mentioned cider were quickly consumed by the starving mob. Every step from a waltz to the Black Bottom was at least attempted by the Hoboes, who did appreciate the music supplied by Nan Kelsey's orchestra.

With an elaborate ceremony Winifred Cullen was proclaimed the vagabond king and June Freeman, the queen.

The famous melodrama, "Gimme Them Papers," was followed by more dancing.

Health Week

CONFERENCE ROOM DISPLAY

In the Conference Room, rechristened Health-Land, were displayed exhibitions to represent all the phases of good health. Food was there in the form of model meals for the fat, thin and normal girls; exercise was temptingly presented in the Camp Corner with its refreshing out-of-doors atmosphere; clothes and shoes, it was apparent, could be healthy as well as pretty and attractive: sleep was especially stressed in the numerous posters, many of which were entered in the poster contest. Two of the attractive displays were the contrasting week-end cases and their contents, carried in 1887 and 1927, and a modern dressing table on which, instead of the usual articles, a carrot supplaced lipstick, cauliflower was powder, rosy-cheeked apples substituted for rouge, cow's cream replaced cold cream, and astringent was water.

HEALTH PLAYS

The health plays were glorious proofs of Barnard's fertile ingenuity.

The "Fall of the House of Germ" was a satire on Barnard's physical status; where the germs finally discovered that the ladies were too fit to offer suitable shelter.

The second play was called "Health Wins Out in the Long Run," and the maiden with spiked heels discovered that her lover had succumbed to the more substantial charms of her rival who sported crêpe sole shoes on every occasion.

"The Pilfered Jewel" was a play on the old melodrama which reigned supreme in the days of Lydia Pinkham.

HEALTH WEEK ASSEMBLY

Something unusual was going on. Even the floor of the Gym had to be used for seats, and it was not the compulsory assembly. Miss Wayman introduced Dr. George Vincent, president of the Rockefeller Foundation. Not a second dragged during his most humorous speech. A few of the many laughs came at the remarks—

"The idea (of Health Week) intrigues me—soon we'll be having an education week."

"Our water is now safe, no matter how it tastes."

"There is an infant mortality rate of 65% in the U. S., 300% in Chili, and in China no one knows the facts, therefore China is the most satisfactory country to make speeches about."

We Wonder Why

ARROWS prefer to point at the harmless individuals on the boardwalk and at the flagpole rather than hit the target. Elbows get in the way of bows. Holes are discovered in the tennis courts.

TENNIS COURTS are soaking wet a week after it rains. Balls have a habit of leaping over the fence, even the new one.

HURDLE bars fall. A hurl ball knocks against the bushes when Raphael is looking. The mattresses for the high jump aren't as soft as those on our beds. Locker keys are difficult to find on the grass.

LAB should interfere with Basketball practices. The ball rolls all around the basket, and then decides not to go in. There's a disadvantage in being on the first team because no oranges are to be seen at 5:30. There are no towels left after the hottest game of the season.

ECONOMY isn't practiced in the gym during the Baseball season, for it isn't necessary to hire cleaning women when our sliders begin to wipe up the floor. The new ball always lands on the balcony. Runners will fling their bats. Coat checks drop out of pockets.

TENIKOIT rings are tossed over the protecting walls of the roof to the ground, five stories below.

INEVITABLY, costumes must be redyed or lengthened the day before Greek Games. Safety pins become more valuable than brooches. The dancers have black feet. Sneakers suddenly become white. Splinters from hoops even pierce through gloves. The paint is not willing to be scraped off the chariot.

CAPS have a habit of splitting ten minutes before the swimming meet. The divers never fail to splash the judges seated on the sides of the pool.

SUBSTITUTION is a favorite elective with some people—we wonder why.

Barnard Camp

Up the banks of the Hudson, about three miles from Ossining, and near a lake, is a picturesque old farmhouse that Barnard has used for its camp during the past two years. The camp is used each week-end by a group of girls who go up either under the auspices of the Athletic Association or of other college organizations, or in individual parties. The activities of the week-ends vary greatly. In the winter one may indulge in almost all of the out-door sports, sledding, skiing, and skating, and in the fall and spring one may make use of a nearby field for baseball or of an adjoining court for tenikoit. Good saddle horses may be obtained at Tarrytown, not very many miles away. The out-door life of the camp is a most welcome change for the girl of the city college.

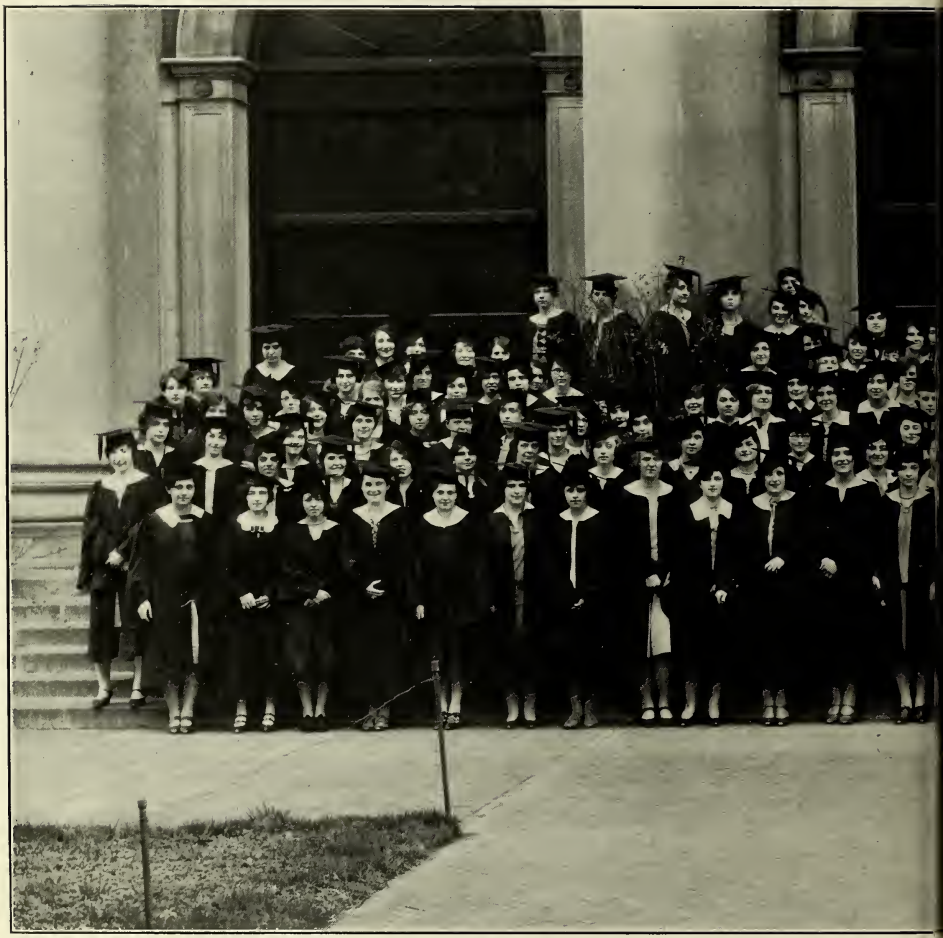
JUNIORS



Class History

Now when first we came to college
We were not so great on knowledge,
And as simple little dears you might not find.
From the city and the farmyard
We came trooping to old Barnard;
And we hoped that everybody would be kind.

With our faces shining brightly,
In our hands we clasped full tightly
The letters from our fathers to the Dean:
"She's a simple little flower,
Grown secluded to this hour—
Oh please be good to our Miranda Jean!"

Oh, we darling little creatures!
What broad smiles o'erspread our features
When we saw a mighty Soph'more come in view;
And they smiled back most politely,
But their grinnings were unsightly,
For they held an awful promise to come true.

But before two weeks were over,
We perceived all was not clover,
And the path of learning is a bitter trail;
With our feet tied with green ribbon
(By our elders kindly given)
We suffered and we languished and grew pale.

And the Sophomores pranced after
With inane and ribald laughter,
And they chased the feeble brains out of our heads.
But we lowered our umbrellas
And our eyes, as they did tell us,
And nightly we dismantled our warm beds.

And we smiled as though we loved them,
Though we gladly could have shoved them
In the Hudson's blackest depths to sink and die.
Till there came the fateful Mysteries,
(The last chapter of our histories
So we thought, and wept, and sobbed our last good-bye).

In our middies and our bloomers,
Both the day girls and the roomers,
We were hurried to the deeds we dare not tell—
Oh, the sufferings and the sorrow,
And the thought of a to-morrow
We would never greet again, alas! . . . Oh, well!

Though our hair is white and hoary,
Still we live to tell the story;
And we really got adjusted very well.
When professors said: "Now read it."
With an effort we stayed seated,
And no longer leaped up like the young gazelle.

Class History (Continued)

With all wisdom and discretion
We convened our first election,
And emerged with our first president, Marián.
And we followed where she led us,
And consumed the wisdom fed us,
And we grew superb as only Freshmen can.

The Seniors they observed us,
And the Sophs no more unnerved us,
And we dwelt in a high aura of prestige.
We received each least oblation,
And we walked in lordly station,
And we held our heads aloft . . . Noblesse oblige!

But the mid-years rolled upon us,
And most unprepared they found us,
And our pride began fast skidding to a fall.
But with trouble and with toil,
We consumed the midnight oil,
And we passed the beastly quizzes—almost all.

And about a month thereafter
Every plank and board and rafter
Of the gym began to echo with our names.
We acquired Hellenic faces
And the strangest Grecian graces,
And we talked a deal of something called the GAMES.

We conceived ourselves as horses,
And as hosts of Attic forces,
And we challenged all the Soph'mores to compete.
Right behind our chariot wheels
We dragged them by their heels,
And we swept all Barnard College off its feet.

And at last we gave our luncheon,
And amidst the happy crunching
There were toasts and calls and laughter and wild roars.
Till with well-subdued elation,
Quite in keeping with our station,
We beheld ourselves the new-fledged Sophomores.

We remember, we remember,
It was just the next September,
That we waited for the Freshmen to appear;
And our brains were full of scheming,
And of wild, fantastic dreaming.
Why! Those Freshmen could not live a half a year.

Oh, our plottings were nefarious,
And our trickery most various,
How the little darlings withered and grew pale;
With but one or two surviving,
And the undertakers thriving,
Well—we really do not dare repeat the tale.

And now with Gertrude Kahrs
As our president, the stars
Of destiny burned brighter and more bright.
Again we were victorious,
And in the Games most glorious.
And our faces beamed with beatific light.

We took ourselves a-dancing,
And with harmony went prancing,
And acquired a more magnificent renown.
Our achievements were tremendous,
(Oh, we knew it!) and stupendous—
And nothing brought our flying colors down.

Until reálization
Came, of French examination,
And we went in fear and trembling to Loiseaux.
"Bonjour, et howdy-do, sir,
Le ciel est beaucoup bleu, sir.
Je suis étudiante, sir. I don't know."

Though we were a bit dejected
At our français so rejected,
Still there was a balm in Gilead, after all.
"What matters that we failed it,
We'll be quite sure to nail it
(We are very nearly Juniors) in the fall."

Now we've conquered that and downed it,
And not so very awful found it,
We are ready all professors to forgive.
For we've had a very fine year,
A right good old Twenty-nine year,
And we've followed very gladly after Sliv.

We have had our pictures taken,
And our faith has been quite shaken,
For we know we are not lovely any more.
We have tripped the light fantastic,
In positions quaint and plastic,
At the Junior Prom upon the polished floor.

And now that we are steady,
Ripe of brain, and fully ready
To don the cap and gown and take our stand,
We'll go swinging down the last year
To unacademic pasture,
And clutch the dear diploma in our hand.

Helen Comes to Barnard

(Absolutely no apologies offered.)

Helen detached herself with a bored little shrug from the cinema screen of MacMillan Theatre, and invisibly stepped into the audience. Being the daughter of Zeus had its obvious advantages.

"Eros," she shuddered, "Eros, what men! Why Paris is a child of Olympus compared to these fur-skinned animals. And I thought that lion skins were only worn by barbarians!"

"Helen," I said very shyly (I'm a daughter of Dionysus and privileged too, you see), "they're raccoon coats, not animals. Welcome to Columbia."

"So this is . . .," she said and paused with a guilty little blush. Even Helen knew that time had dulled the edge of that familiar salutation to a foreign land. I thought immediately of Cyrano and Lindy.

"Yes," I nodded, "and I'm from Barnard, the female seminary across the Avenue."

"All female?" She was obviously interested. "I've always wondered how those things worked out. We women weren't allowed much contact with the higher—higher culture except the little we received from our husbands. That's why I left Menelaos for Paris,—more intelligence."

"Honestly," I gurgled incredulously. "You'd adore Barnard, Helen. We get culture in scads from very learned men, awfully learned. That's why we go out with Columbia men, so's to regain our balance. Some of them are really quite nice though."

Helen looked at me. Then she turned and gazed at a raccoon coat. Finally she looked at Paris. "Of course," she said brightly. "Very. But tell me, where do all you girls sleep?"

"Well half of Barnard commutes, that is they spend most of their day traveling back and forth. The rest of us live here and spend the time they waste in the trains, talking. The dorms are marvelous except that you can't do much work, but after all you get your culture in classes, so it doesn't matter much in time of stress."

"What?" Helen asked curiously. "What do you mean by times of stress?"

I looked perturbed. Those periods were the one drawback that marred my enjoyment of college life. "Exams," I said sadly. "Exams. Helen, are like the tortures of Hades, only more so. You see it isn't enough to get culture thrown at you. but you must prove that you've retained it. And to show conclusively that the Pythagorean theorem for instance will never fade from your mind, the professors have ordained exams. You cram like mad the night before, flunk the paper and prove to the world that the words of your professors are as indelibly engraved on your heart as the memory of your Junior Prom."

"How extraordinary," Helen said gaily. "And do all those raccoon coats cram too?"

"They don't cram so awfully much," I said crossly. "Anyway I thought you said you didn't like them."

"I don't, but they intrigue me."

"Oh, do they?" I spoke with a superior little inflection in my voice. "Well you ought to see Harvard men; some of them would make Achilles look as insignificant as . . . Menelaos."

Helen's interest was revived again. "Harvard?"

"Yes," I explained. "A red brick university that has a fairish football team and plays a game that is called the Harvard-Yale game where anyone who is anyone goes. The men are cute."

Helen looked bored again. "Thanks so much," she said, and started to melt back into the screen. "Menelaos," I heard her say, "Do you suppose they'll show us at Harvard? I hope so . . ."

February 22, 1928.

Lay long in bed, because of festivities and glee enjoyed by all last nite, when did attend Ye Olde Junior Prom at the Ambassador Hotel, as attractive a ballroom as ever I did set eyes on. And all the girls looking lovely what with orchids and silver slippers and all, and the men as nice as they could be. And met Misses Gildersleeve, Weeks, Dorado, Professor and Mrs. Braun, and Mr. Kay. Then did set me down to supper, a festive meal, and thought how Patty Dent and her Committee comprised of Misses Hoyt, Hughes, Littlefield, Mohun and Seifert did deserve much credit for the success of the affaire. And so danced some more to the musique of the Ambassador Band, and thence to Childs' for coffee where did meet most my classmates with their escorts. And then home in a hired petrol-waggon, and so to bed about five hours of the clock.

To a Nearby Restaurant

At noon beneath thy noble doors
I pass with hungry hopes flung high;
At thought of food my spirit soars—
I quickly choose a spot nearby.

In ordering I always say,
"One tea, and bring a tongue on rye—
I have a one o'clock today,
Please hurry! Time is flitting by."

At my request to "hurry pray"
The waiter buzzes like a fly,
And shouts above his laden tray,
"You'll get your corned beef bye and bye!"

At last my order looms in sight
And with my knife and fork I ply;
Alas! (who knows my sorry plight)
That tongue has changed to ham on rye!!

STUDENTS

News Item — Examinations Are Fun, Declares Dean

Students should Read a Good Detective Story and Go to Bed Early the Night Before.

IF LOVE WERE ALL

(A Tragedy)

Question on examination paper: If the demand for labor decreases and the supply of labor remains constant, how will it be possible to maintain the same wage level?

Student: (Going suddenly insane in class) Ha-ha! Isn't that the sweetest thing? A little wage level! But between you and me Mrs. Baker, I don't care a thing about wage levels. You know, I read the best detective story last night. I simply must tell you. See, all these horrible crimes are being committed and this man, this famous criminologist offers a big reward for the capture of the fiend, and all the time he's the one who's doing it He's the fiend, see? Isn't that too killing for words? Ha-ha! I knew you'd love it. Wage levels? No, we weren't talking about wage levels, Mrs. Baker. We were talking about this fellow, this famous criminologist, who offers a reward—But I do not choose to talk about wage levels, Mrs. Baker. And anyhow I had the floor, and it's very rude—I'm telling you a story, see, and you've got to listen. There was this criminologist, this nasty man, this nasty bad man—No! I don't like wage levels. (At this point the student breaks down and commences to weep softly. Two attendants sneak up behind her with a strait-jacket.)—Don't like levels. Don't like levels. Ever since I was a little child, a little innocent child, Mrs. Baker, I tell you I haven't liked levels. Me for the hills every time! You know that poem of Sidney Lanier's—

"What heartache, ne'er a hill!
Inexorable, vapid, vague and dull
The drear sand levels drain my spirit low."

Poetry! There's something you can take to, now. Twinkle, Twinkle—stop me if you've heard this one—twinkle, twinkle little star,—Say! That reminds me. There's a story I've been wanting to tell you for the longest time. It seems there was this criminologist who ran away the day he was born and never grew up. His name was Peter Pan. (Student dances around the room several times with the guards after her. Then makes a beautiful leap for the chandelier and hangs suspended by one foot.) Ha-ha! I've been fooling you all the time, Mrs. Baker. I'm the criminologist. Ha-ha!

Mrs. Baker: (Nervously) Ha-ha!

"I had thoughts of sitting up to see the eclipse."

JOSEPHINE BRUELL

"I would not have her lose her time."

HELEN BURES

"All was firm and sound."

ELIZABETH CAHALANE

"I said I fear'd I might be some interruption to their business."

MARGARET BURFORD

"Leave it to men to snap and snarl,
Be you the sweet engaging girl."

ADELAIDE CAHILL

"I much heeded verse."

OLIVE BUSHNELL

"And hence our cash departs so fast,
Cash, that no charm can bind."

ETHEL CALLAN

"I might be thought partial."

MARGARET CARROLL

"Your music, far, all Amphion's art exceeds,
Not trees and rocks, but provinces it leads."

MARY CLARK

"He said he lent me that book
Not to wrap up, but to read."

KATHLEEN CHAMBERS

"They left me highly pleased."

MATILDA CLAYTON

"I have great heaviness on my spirit."

MARIAN CHURCHILL

"No single art engaged her vigorous mind,
In every scene, her active genius shined."

MILDRED CLAYTON

"I dream'd last night."

BERTHA COHEN

"A power to advise and recommend."

ELIZABETH COHOE

"I received them with all possible civility."

VIRGINIA COOK

"She was a charming lass."

DOROTHY COULTER

"We desire you to use your endeavors further."

RUTH COWDRICK

"What signifies that?"

PHYLLIS CRANE

"She should be distracted if she should not know me."

WINIFRED CULLEN

"She thanks me for my kindness."

PATTY DENT

"On her visage such a smile
And she talked in such a style."

MARION DALES

"She, at the soul enlivening ball,
But small amusement found."

LORETTA DONOVAN

"A being sent hither all good to bestow."

MARTHA DAVIDOW

"She answered pretty readily."

ELIZABETH DUBLIN

"Give me Liberty or give me Death."

CATHERINE DWYER

"Told her I wished her well,
Should be glad to hear of her welfare."

KATHRYN EMSHEIMER

"She had aversion to assemblies."

BETTY EATON

"But feel I not, that I want
Strength to do that glorious thing?"

LILY EPSTEIN

"But took occasion to speak pretty earnestly."

IRENE COOPER EMERSON

"That flow of wit."

KATHRYN EVERETT

"He said he thought I ought to be encouraged."

ALICE FAIR

"I also forgave all them that reproached me."

DOROTHY FLAHERTY

"She hurried away everything before her."

BERYL FINCH

"Long have I sat on this disastrous shore,
And sighing, sought to gain a passage o'er
To Europe's towns."

ELEANOR FRANKEL

"She discoursed me about writing a History."

RUTH FINE

"Whose powers inherit
The quintessence of public spirit."

VALERIE FRANKEL

"I am published the first time."

FRANCES FREEMAN

"When a matter is done,
'Tis a folly to fret."

VERA FREUDENHEIM

"Another morn, risen on mid-noon and the sky on which you closed your eye was cloudless."

JUNE FREEMAN

"Lord! Make my tongue a Tree of Life!"

EUGENIE FRIBOURG

"Learn the grave style and goodly phrase,
Soft handed down from Cromwell's Days."

ELEANOR FREER

"I am hopeful."

MARGARET FULLER

"Verse is too mean your merit to display."

DOROTHY FUNCK

"Without vanity I may say."

MAY GARDNER

"How shall I shun the mischiefs that impend."

ALBERTINE GAHEN

"She was much distressed."

ELLEN GAVIN

"Her back bent, crippled with the weight
Of age, and work, and cares of state."

MARVEL GALLACHER

"I have been exceedingly tormented in my mind."

ELIZABETH GAY

"How shall I make Columbia yet my friend?"

SARA GEALEY

"The place I was in required more Time and Strength than I had."

RUTH GINSBERG

"I must be temperate in my conversation."

DOROTHY GELLER

"A patriot firm, while breath he draws,
He'll perish in his country's cause."

RUTH GOLD

"Inspired at the sound, while the name she repeats."

JOSEPHINE GIARDINA

"I am resolved to work as fast as I can."

SADIE GOODFRIEND

"I would express and excite all suitable
Expressions of Charity on these occasions."

ADELE GREENE

"I purposed that I would grow more fruitful in my conversation."

DOROTHY HALLOCK

"It comforts me to see how extremely beloved
I now find her to be in the Neighborhood."

AGNES GRESS

"It was not ill done."

LILLIAN HANLON

"She said hers was an idle calling."

PRISCILLA HALLETT

"She said, 'I wish you well and all your family.'"

FELICE HARRIS

"Be wicked as you will."

ELSA HARTMANN

"When I must speak what is evil of any man,
I must balance the evil with the mention of the good."

BEATRICE HEIMAN

"And thrice was bellowed from his tongue,
The President is always wrong."

CARLOTTA HEIDE

"God help us all to look our best!
This man was captain of the rest."

MARCELLA HELLMAN

"It is not a matter that I trouble myself about."

JULIA HEILBRONNER

"Thus all the business of mankind,
Are huddled in her shattered mind."

ETTA HELMER

"Could not discern that any impression was made on her."

FRANCES HOLTZBERG

"Think you she is not wide awake?"

GRACE HOWE

"I feel a pleasure in presenting you."

FLORETTE HOLZWASSER

"Disturb me not, I must go on;
Ten minutes, while I talk are gone."

RUTH HOYT

"There is a lad of uncommon capacity."

HELOISE HOUGH

"She gave no answer as I remember."

IRENE HUBER

"Competent to all purposes the occasion requires."

KATHRYN HUBER

"This bookish inclination."

DOROTHY HURD

"She, only she, can please the taste."

JULIE HUDSON

"You have goodness following you all your days."

EMMA HYMAN

"And from a convinced conscience, she now also speaks."

ELIZABETH EVANS HUGHES

"Scarce a girl was so universally known as she."

MARIE IPPOLITO

"She answered me in the most unreserved manner."

MARGARET JENNINGS

"She received me very frankly."

HAZEL KAHN

"It is sometimes of advantage to hear what others have to say."

BORGHILD JOHNSON

"I began to be uneasy that I had so long neglected doing anything."

GERTRUDE KAHRS

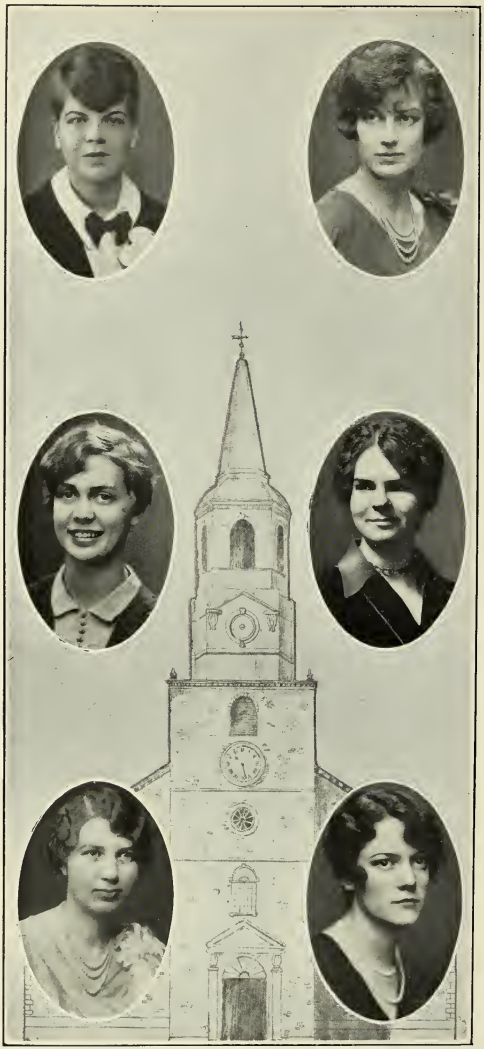
"O'er these wild seas a shade I threw,
And a new world my pencil drew."

CAROLYN JOY

"She did a great morning's work."

MYRA KANTOR

"No block in old Dodona's Grove,
Could ever more oracular prove."



NAN KELSEY

"I'll sing thy pleasures
In enthusiastic measures."

ELIZABETH KUCK

"Her strong capacious mind
By fetters unconfined."

ELIZABETH KEUTHEN

"Pardon all my wanderings."

LOUISE LAIDLAW

"Oh, if poetic madness seize my brain
Shall I not rhyme when conscience guides my strain?"

EDITH KRECJI

"Weep, weep no more, my Jersey lass."

ELIZABETH LAING

"The drum was beat, the flag displayed,
The soldiers met upon parade."

MEGAN LAIRD

"A genius from a western wood."

VIRA LENHART

"I resolved to speak if I could get an opportunity."

BERTHA LAMBERT

"For he, of all the world alone.
Owns the long-sought philosopher's stone."

RUTH LE ROCKER

"To him I refer you, for all matters of intelligence."

ANNETTE LEHMAN

"What good may this person be capable of doing if she be minded of it?"

ELIZABETH LEONARD

"She said, if her sister were for it, she would not hinder it."

EMILY LEONARD

"A bargain's a bargain and must be made good."

GERMAINE LORIN

"Opinions are changing fast."

SYLVIA LIPPMAN

"Nor do I know anyone whom I could more assuredly recommend for his capacity and fidelity."

RUTH LOUNSBERY

"But not inexpert in wiles."

ELIZABETH A. LITTLEFIELD

"She has better faculty than I at managing affairs."

JEAN MACALISTER

"There ne'er was a task but afforded some ease,
Nor a calling in life, but had something to please."

IONA MCLEAN

"I would forego my ease
And traverse lakes, or ravage seas,
And dress in lace, or what you please."

MARGARET MARKS

"Aroused to more poetic passions
Both by his theme and situation."

RUTH MAGURN

"Her taste for the fine arts is strangely increased,
And Latin's no longer a mark of the beast."

BETTY MARTIN

"If but in Wood and Littleton well read
The devil shall help you to your daily bread."

MAY MANDELBAUM

"Nor sleep too soundly at the midnight hour."

ROSE MARX

"What human power shall dare to bind,
The mere opinions of the mind."

MARGARET MASONE

"And lavish's away many thousands of words upon me,
Before I could return one word in answer."

LUCY MATTHEWS

"Her desire is to do all the good she can."

LOUISE MATTINGLY

"She is the prop of all that's good."

BARBARA
MAVROPOULOS

"When anything begins to raise any signs of anger in me, I would endeavor to allay it."

LILLIAN MAY

"This is but cold comfort."

FRANCES McDONALD

"For, slighting all the sages knew,
I learn philosophy from you."

FRANCES MILLER

"She passes trial fair and free,
And takes in form her first degree."

MARGARET MORIARTY

"My voice was much enfeebled."

VIRGINIA MILLER

"I said little."

MARY MOSS

"I was engaged in almost continuous speech."

LENORE MOOLTEN

"Lord, let that person be successful in her practice."

MAY MURRAY

"His roar would change your beasts to fear."

DOROTHY NEUER

"That I might be assured I had not misunderstood her."

EVELYN T. PAGE

"Little was said to him."

JULIE NEWMAN

"Since he to me is all in all."

HELEN PALLISTER

"She had an extraordinary good mind."

MARIE NORTON

"For where's the ecstasy in this
To loiter in poetic bliss
And go without a dinner."

ROSE PATTON

"Vigorous youth."

CLAUDIA PEARLMAN

"She stood amidst Columbia's sons."

HELEN PHELAN

"She spoke with some earnestness."

DOROTHY PELSANG

"For my own part I was always afraid of proceeding to condemn any person."

SYBIL PHILLIPS

"Till rose a king with potent charm,
His foes by meekness to disarm."

ETHEL PERLMAN

"I have made considerable progress."

OILME PLOOMPUU

"I was very fond of voyages."

EDITH POMERANTZ

"And thus her voice in mournful wise,
Pursued the prologue of her sighs."

CAROLINE RELYEA

"A poor man, under grievous distraction, must have my compassion expressed for him"

RUTH RABLEN

"Mathematics, at present, we all may know,
Without being hanged for connections below."

MARION RESS

"The times were never better."

JENNIE REICH

"The earth could not afford me greater pleasure than her most agreeable conversation."

MARGARET RITTENHOUSE

"I consider her a friend to mankind."

HELEN ROBERTS

"She was feverish."

LOUISE ROCKFIELD

"He told me with tears that these sorrows would bring him to his grave."

ELSA ROBINSON

"May your services never be forgotten."

LOUISE ROME

"Within these walls the doctrines taught,
Are of such vast concern,
That all the world, with one consent,
Here strives to live—and learn."

ETHEL ROBINSON

"But mercy is without dispute
Her first and darling attribute."

ANNA ROOME

"There is a young Gentlewoman."

ELEANOR ROSENBERG

"Nor lacked they each poetic being."

MARGUERITE RUBINOW

"Nobody asked her whether she were out of breath."

RUTH ROSENBERG

"Pursue, well pleased, your theologic schemes,
Attend professors, and correct your themes."

ERNESTINE RUMPH

"Provision is made for the purposes mentioned."

CHARLOTTE ROTHERY

"Came home about one-half hour after four o'clock."

MADELINE RUSSELL

"About this time, the calamities of the English nation caused me to be called an hour earlier mornings than I used to rise."

FRANCES SANFORD

"This is a glorious day."

MARTHA SCHARF

"May you enjoy happiness."

HELEN SAVERY

"She speaks, she moves, with all attracting grace."

ELISE SCHLOSSER

"Knowledge, in truth, is the great sun in the firmament."

DOROTHY SHAEFER

"It would have been more agreeable to me to have had cause to continue in that opinion, than to change it."

HELEN SCHULDENFREI

"I bought a couple of printed Proclamations relating to that affair."

GLADYS SCHWARTZ

"We concluded to be happy, if we could."

HANNAH SHOR

"Wishing for a few weeks' uninterrupted leisure."

SYLVIA SEIFERT

"Thus Gage's arms did fortune bless,
With triumph, safety and success."

CATHERINE SLOANE

"He became soon attached to me."

DOROTHY SHANKROFF

"But being of strong judgment."

MARGARET SMITH

"Having correct and gentlemanly manners."

I certainly appreciate the honor of being first to sign your book.

MARIAN SMITH

"She was a most agreeable companion."

Here's hoping Deutsch geht gut! Marian

EDITH SPIVACK

"I never would retain upon my spirit any resentments of any wrong or slight."

MARY LOU SMITH

"Full of pleasantry and good humor."

ALICE STACEY

"Held forth with an elocution grave."

JUDITH SOOKNE

"Skilled was our Squire at making speeches."

BETTY STEINHEIMER

"Lord help me to learn."

VIRGINIA STEUER

"What would censorious Sally say?"

ALBERTA STRIMAITUS

"We were all sensible."

ALMA STEVENS

"Shewed herself extremely satisfied."

NANCY THOMAS

"By schools untaught, from Nature's source she drew."

NORMA STINER

"In every art of subtlety untaught,
She spoke no more, than just the Thing she ought."

MARY THOMASON

"It would be idle to lose time."

HARRIET THOMPSON

"Bold fancy conveys me to Hudson's retreats."

GERTRUDE TONKONOGY

"But, if you must torment the world with rhymes."

LILLIAN TIERNEY

"Adorned with all that nature could impart,
To please the fancy and to gain the heart."

ELSIE TRAUNSTEIN

"Lord, carve ot thy Graces and Comforts,
A rich portion unto that person."

IRIS TOMASULO

"We hold these truths to be self-evident."

HELEN UNGULEIDA

"She answered she should not be against that that might he for her comfort."

IDA VAN DYCK

"From my infancy, I was passionately fond of reading."

HOPE VAN DE WATER

"But a few good words must not be all the good that you are to expect from us."

JULIE VAN RIPER

"Comes weary home at night, but comes with joy."

GEORGIANNA VOLZE

"I demand justice."

RUTH VON ROESCHLAUB

"Four years at College passed away,
In sleep and business and play."

ELIZABETH WEBER

"I urged her as the fittest moderator."

ESTELLE WEINSTEIN

"She expressed her inability to be serviceable."

JEANNETTE WHITE

"There does not exist in the compass of language an arrangement of words to express so much."

MARTHA WEINTRAUB

"I am every day doing a variety of services which I do not ask to have remembered."

ALLISON WEIR

"Ye sages, who travel on mighty designs,
To measure meridians and parallel lines."

MARGUERITE WEINTZEN

"I weary myself in walking from one end and side of the Town to t'other."

FRANCES WILSON

"His sentiments and mine perfectly agreed."

MARY WINN

"Said the Goth to the Vandal,
The prince to the king,
Let us do a mad action,
To make the world ring."

MURIEL WOOLF

"Such plumage round her visage wears."

CAROLYN WOOLF

"From morning till night she was still on the move."

MARY ZWEMER

"Being sure I should be useful in moderating."

Singing together is one of the best ways of having a good time. There doesn't seem to be an intense urge at Barnard to sing for Alma Mater—there is no "campus singing" in the romantic twilight—no soft and tender harmonies drifting up to the dormitory windows to draw the earnest students from their books. You can see there is a serious lack in our lives. Now this void is filled by Glee Club. Try it and see,—we have a professional coach who conducts try-outs at the beginning of every semester. You've missed a good time this year, but come out next.

The Société Française gives monthly teas at which its members and their friends may meet many prominent French men and women, and where they will often have the opportunity of listening to speeches which will bring them into contact with French life and thought of the present day. Moreover, these teas afford an opportunity for hearing good French, and for getting personally acquainted with members of the Romance Language Department.

The Psychology Club first "saw the light of day" in the Conference Room in December, 1926. On that memorable occasion, a group of super-enthusiastic psychology students proclaimed the advent of a new and seemingly highly interesting organization. In January, 1926, the club made its formal bow to Barnard society in the college parlor, presenting to a large and appreciative audience its first speaker—the famous psychologist, Dr. Woodworth. Since that time the Psychology Club has been fortunate in securing the services of many very distinguished persons—among whom should be mentioned Professors Poffenberger, Bingham, and Justraw—and has also made a number of visits to the most important clinical centers of the city.

Four years ago Barnard had no German Club, but there was a group of interested students who met from time to time in order to discuss informally matters of interest pertaining to German. In 1924 the members of that group who were still in college organized the "Deutscher Kreis." In its first year it received a generous endowment from Mr. Edward D. Adams, and was thereby enabled to give more ambitious programs than it could have otherwise. In addition it has always had the hearty and valuable coöperation of the German Department. The principal function of the "Deutscher Kreis" is to give students a less academic view of German life than they can obtain through their studies. The Club has been successful in securing excellent speakers and musicians to entertain its members, and not least among its benefits is that of giving practice in the speaking of German to its members. The special pride of the Club is its traditional Christmas celebration, with the tree, and singing of German Christmas carols.

The Christian Association of Barnard College endeavors "through its activities" to understand and work out the Christian way of life. Through its discussions at teas and Faculty-Student luncheons and through the fellowship gained at camp, it aims to interpret Christian ideals in the light of present-day problems.

Secretary - - - - - - - - - - - America Gonzales
Treasurer - - - - - - - - - - - - Ruth Greenwald

Spain, as we all know, has built up a host of rich traditions, and the Spanish Club of Barnard is rapidly following suit.

We all remember with pride the visit of Spain's leading dramatist, Benavente, to the College in 1923. He and thirty of the most prominent Spaniards in New York City were entertained at luncheon by the Spanish Club at that time.

In 1924, Gabriela Mistral, the famous Latin-American poetess, read some of her poems to a group of advanced Spanish students. It was an unforgetable experience to hear this peasant woman from the high Andes reciting her verses in vibrant Castilian. In 1926 and 1927 came those two exquisite Spanish women, Lucrecia Bori, of the Metropolitan Opera House, and Raquel Meller.

Memories of these Spanish celebrities are not the only traditions of the Spanish Club. The presentation of plays is an important chapter in our history.

The past history of the club is a constant inspiration to its members. We are quite sure that the coming years will continue to be fully worth while for the Circulo Hispanio.

Newman Club

President - - - - - - - - - - - - Helen Phelan
Secretary - - - - - - - - - - - - Eileen Heffernan
Treasurer - - - - - - - - - - - - Ellen Gavin

Newman Club is the Catholic organization of Barnard College. It fills a need in college life by stressing the intellectual side of Catholicism. Its philosophy and other mental activities are discussed under the supervision of a chaplain. Meetings are held bi-monthly to which the college is invited.

Il Quindicinale

President - - - - - - - - - - - Vincinza Savoia
Vice-President - - - - - - - - - - Lillian Gallo
Secretary-Treasurer - - - - - - - - - Marie Ippolito

The aim of Il Quindicinale is to stimulate the growing interest in the beautiful things of Italy and to offer to lovers of Rome the best that Italian culture has to give. The increase in our membership encourages us in the hope that our modest efforts have not been useless.

This year the club feels fortunate in having a most attractive club room in the newly dedicated Casa Italiana in which it will hold a number of its activities. These activities include, besides the customary socials and lectures, receptions to distinguished Italians, a play to be given by the club members and the presentation of Italian films. Also visits to Italian art galleries and places of interest in New York, such as the well-known little Italy.

Il Quindicinale hopes that next year it may grow in numbers and wealth so that it may undertake still greater things.

Menorah

President - - - - - - - - - - - - - Miriam Lipton
Vice-President - - - - - - - - - - Sulamith Schwartz
Secretary - - - - - - - - - - - - - Anny Birnbaum
Treasurer - - - - - - - - - - - - - Edith Birnbaum

Menorah is composed of a group of students interested in all of the cultural aspects of Jewish history and modern Jewish life. In addition to several talks on modern timely subjects we are looking forward to a group of lectures on medieval life and thought, delivered by men and women of great prominence in the field.

Classical-Club

President - - - - - - - - - - - - Sienna Delahunt
Secretary-Treasurer - - - - - - - - - - Edith Colvin

The Classical Club was organized twenty-two years ago by students interested in the Classics. The purpose of the club is to give a broader view and greater appreciation of Greek and Roman life, literature, and art. At its meetings informal lectures and talks are given by distinguished people in this field on various aspects of the Classics. The club includes in its membership not only undergraduates but interested members of the Faculty and alumnae as well.

This club was founded in May, 1896, in the first home of Barnard College on Madison Avenue. The purpose of the club, as set forth in the Constitution, is to promote the interests of the Botanical Department of Barnard College and to promote friendly relations among the students of that department. Every student who has worked more than one year in the Botanical Department is eligible to membership in the club. The membership includes, therefore, not only undergraduates but also graduate students and alumnae. The activities of the club are one or more business meetings a year, when so voted, and a lecture by some Botanist of prominence. Botanical field trips and meetings for reporting and discussing scientific work occur occasionally. In celebration of its twenty-fifth anniversary in 1921, the club presented the department with an apparatus for projection of both slides and pictures, and it has made gifts from time to time to add to the equipment of the laboratories.

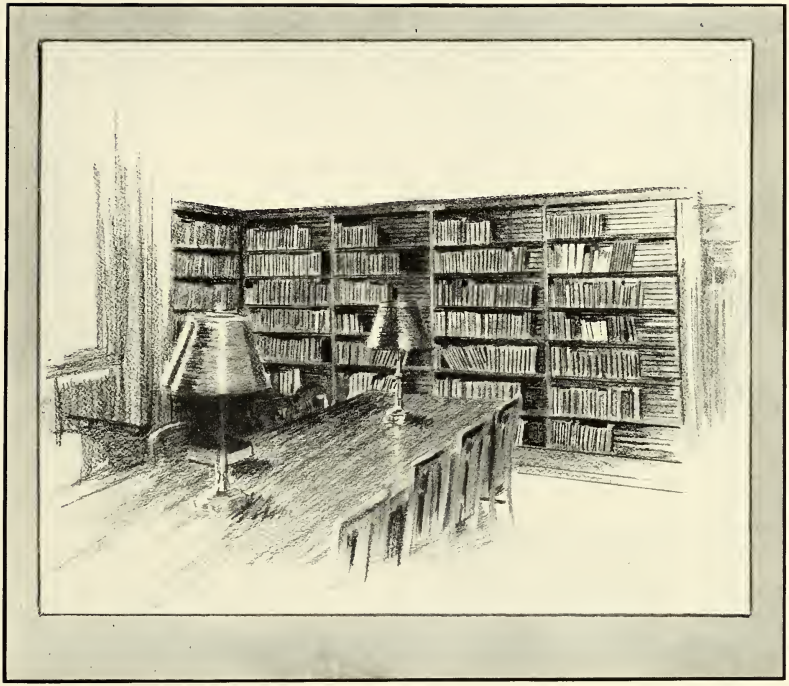
College Assembly: Professor Feuillerat of the University of Rennes, "A French Girl's Education."



Intercollegiate Activities

Junior Month.

Junior Month, now in its twelfth year is an organized effort to interpret modern social work to the undergraduate girl. Each year twelve junior representatives of as many eastern colleges spend the month of July together in New York and, under the auspices of the Charity Organization Society, engage in an intensive survey of the entire field of social work in this city. Some of the problems investigated this year were Mental Hygiene and Psychiatry, Housing, Child Welfare and Juvenile Delinquency, Immigration, Community Work, and Medical Social Service. The work is evenly divided between lectures by experts in the various fields, field trips, discussion and actual case work in the districts of the C.O.S. In this way the student is enabled to apply and test her psychological and sociological theories in practical work. Junior Month is an experiment in modern education as well as an invaluable opportunity for the undergraduate girl to investigate one of the most interesting fields of work open to college women. Barnard representative: Helen Greenblat.

Student Government Conference.

The annual conference of the Women's Intercollegiate Association for Student Government was held on November 10, 11, 12, at Smith College, Northampton, Massachusetts. Representatives were present from most of the women's colleges in the United States.

The activity of the conference, as is customary, consisted of the exchange of information and opinion on problems connected with student government. At the last session Bryn Mawr, Mount Holyoke, Radcliffe, Smith and Wellesley Colleges withdrew from the Association, their delegates giving as their reasons the feeling that representation of the same colleges at the W.I.A.S.G., the N.S.F.A., and perhaps other conferences necessarily entailed a great deal of duplication, and the fact that by withdrawing from the W.I.A.S.G. they could devote their energies more entirely to the upbuilding of the N.S.F.A., which they felt was the most significant intercollegiate organization.

For some years past Barnard has felt that there is little value in a conference as heterogeneous in composition as the W.I.A.S.G., especially for a college whose problems are so different from those of any other member. After the return of this year's delegate from the conference, it was therefore voted by the Representative Assembly to withdraw from the Association.

Ruth Richards was the Barnard delegate.

Intercollegiate Activities

Women's Intercollegiate News Association Conference.

The twelfth Annual Conference of the Women's Intercollegiate News Association was held in October at Wilson College. Representatives from ten colleges met and discussed editorial and business policies of college newspapers. The conference was addressed by such prominent men in the collegiate and journalistic circles as President Warfield of Wilson, Mr. Ferguson of the Philadelphia Ledger, Mr. Steinmetz of the Harrisburg Telegram, and Mr. Bond from the School of Journalism at Columbia. The Barnard delegates were Harriet Taylor, Pearl Friedman, Frances Holtzberg, and Eugenie Fribourg.

National Student Federation Conference.

On December 15, 16, 17, almost two hundred delegates from colleges all over the United States met at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Nebraska, in the Third Annual Congress of the N.S.F.A. There was present also a delegate from the Confederation Internationale des Etudiants, into which the N.S.F.A. was admitted last summer.

The Conference, besides discussing general educational and student government problems accomplished the following concrete results:

First steps toward the establishment of a Central Office, the removal of the Federation from debt by the application of the convention fee surplus, the recognition of the soundness of the policy of maintaining standing committees to function throughout the year and the addition of one on student government to those already in existence, recognition of the possibilities of the Federation along the lines of travel, international relations, curriculum, athletics, student government, and other subjects of significant student interest. In addition, the conference voted to recommend spending more time on the consideration of international issues. A significant resolution was passed decrying the persecution of student minorities in various European universities and declaring the principles of toleration and international cooperation on which the N.S.F.A. was conceived.

Barnard delegate: Ruth Richards.

Student Fellowship Drive

The motive of the Student Fellowship Drive, which has been held annually since 1924, is the promotion of international understanding among the students of the world through the medium of exchange students between Barnard and foreign schools and universities. The success of the drive as well as the reports of the girls who have won the Fellowship for the past three years certainly seems to justify our belief that eventually common international understanding will lead to world peace. The Fellowship was won in 1927 by Margaret Goodell, who is now studying at the Sorbonne, and we have at Barnard Oilme Ploompuu from Estonia, and Barbara Zarniko from Germany.

Mysteries

DO YOU REMEMBER?

When we were frightened Freshmen:

That superior feeling when it rained for the benefit of our umbrellas;

The chill terror struck by the pirates when they entered to the tune of "Gee We're Great!"

That awe-inspiring moment when Noel gave Bib the Mysteries' Book?

When we were swaggering Sophomores:

The glee of watching the Frosh struggle with their license tags:

The grand and ghostly feeling when we, in sheets, marched to the daisy song;

The joys of watching Thirty play the idiot for the benefit of doting Juniors and pitying Seniors?

When we were Junior Sisters:

That protecting feeling after Thirty had declared war on Thirty-one;

The glee of the bandits who disturbed our fasting in the cafe;

Thirty's excellent prophecy of a College of Tomorrow?

Barnard College Club

ALLERTON HOUSE

130 East 57th Street

President - - - Mrs. Paul M. Whelan
Vice-President Mrs. Florence de L. Lowther
Secretary - - Miss Elizabeth Armstrong
Treasurer - - Miss Ruth W. Talmage

The Barnard College Club of New York City was organized in January, 1926, and at that time opened a clubroom in the Allerton House. By September, 1927, the Club was in need of larger quarters and was fortunate in securing a larger and more attractive lounge in the same building, formerly the New York Wellesley Club. In addition, bedrooms were taken over for the transient use of members and their guests. The Club is still growing and the next probable move will be, in the near future, to the Barbizon, 140 East 63rd Street, where four other College Clubs are now located.

The Club is a strictly social organization, members of which are Barnard College Alumnae.

The activities of the Club are many and varied. This year they include the annual luncheon, held at the Sherry-Netherland, Miss Katherine Mayo, speaker; a dinner dance, an art exhibition and a fashion show, besides teas, bridge parties, dinners and many other interesting events.

The Club extends a cordial invitation to all alumnae and undergraduates to visit the clubrooms and learn from the executive secretary all the privileges and advantages of the Barnard College Club.

The Evolution of the Undergraduate as Seen in Previous Mortarboards

Grace Harriet Goodale '99.

Editor of Mortarboard but with an otherwise impeccable record.

"Two things alone
To mankind known
This Barnard girl was pat in,
"All Kipling's verse
She could rehearse
Likewise a little Latin."

Now an instructor in Greek and Latin.

Florence deL. Lowther, '12.

President of the Barnard Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. President of the French Club. Junior Show. Voted the best dressed.

"You have often been so bold as to charm us when we were positively out of humor."

Now Assistant Professor of Zoology.

Emilie J. Hutchinson, '05.

Freshman Vice-President. Sophomore President Debating Club. French Club. Ping Pong Club. Bulletin. Barnard Bear. Suicide Club. Freshman play. Sophomore play.

"Cold wisdom sitting on superfluous folly."

Now Associate Professor of Economics.

Katherine Swift Doty, '04.

Executive Committee of the Undergraduate Association. President of Deutscher Kreis. A. A. Executive Committee. Tennis Executive chairman. Ping Pong Club. French Club. College Settlement Association. Barnard Bear. Business Manager of Mortarboard.

"I told them once, I told them twice,
They would not listen to advice."

Now the Bursar of Barnard College.

J. Emilie Young, '19.

Chairman of Sophomore Luncheon. Wigs and Cues. Mortarboard.

"Oh never leave your work undone.
Lessons come and then comes fun.
You'll succeed if this you follow—
The fun, though, always comes—tomorrow.

Now Instructor in History.

From "Her" Diary

Friday, May 27, 1927.

My Senior Week at last! It's going to be packs nicer than the three I've watched—specially if it keeps up the way it has begun. It started with an awfully nice tea-dance in Brooks. After that—Step-Singing. I've been to three before this, but never have I been as impressed or depressed. I left singing just a little early to make a dash for my costume. We gave Senior Show right after it—Oh, for the jolly life of a tar. Hope the audience enjoyed seeing me as a sailor as much as I enjoyed being one. I adore living in the dorms. We sat up and talked for a while after show, but I'm going to bed now to get ready for a busy week.

Saturday, May 28, 1927.

Two performances of Show today have quite done me in. Danced afterwards, so it's late now. It was great to get all those congratulations—I'm wondering if I'll ever live up to peoples' expectations.

Sunday, May 29, 1927.

Slept all morning. Baccalaureate this afternoon at Saint Paul's—Chaplain Knox gave us a very inspiring sermon about the future. Went to Edith's to dinner, and then came up to Brooks again to a tea for the Seniors. All I seem to be doing is eating, shaking hands, and thanking people for their good wishes. We hung around almost all evening in Polly's room, incidentally had food,—and so to bed.

Monday, May 30, 1927.

Senior Ball! How nice it looks written on paper and what a gorgeous affair it was. Had it in the big dining room of Hewitt. Adele was chairman. I was so proud of my class—everyone looked like a million. I had the best time in ages. Went to four teas this afternoon—three in Brooks and one in Hewitt.

From "Her" Diary (Continued)

Tuesday, May 31, 1927.

By virtue of paying my fees, etc., I am now a member of the Associate Alumnae. Attended my first meeting this afternoon and then they gave two plays and served tea on the terrace. Next a Trustees' Supper in the Gym, after which the Greek Games statue was unveiled.

Wednesday, June 1, 1927.

Class day—a good time—the reward of much rehearsing. Marion and Peg made the salutatory and valedictory speeches, the Dean addressed us, Marge presented the class gift to the college, and Helen Deutsch read an amusing class history.

But commencement was the best. Never before have I felt so important and so insignificant at the same time. It was held in front of Columbia Library, just as the sun was setting—the campus looked glorious. There seemed to be millions and millions of caps and gowns; and the academic procession was one of the most impressive things I've ever watched. Can't realize that commencement has come and gone.

Thursday, June 2, 1927.

Ivy ceremony came before Banquet. Robbie was chairman and we all got such a thrill out of it—the last serious thing of the week—for the Banquet that followed was hilarity from one end to the other.

SENIOR WEEK

Senior Banquet

Ladies: Churchill's Circulating Circus has traveled far from "Greenland's icy mountains to Himalaya's snowy plains" to appear before you tonight and we plan to soar to new heights in presenting this remarkable performance to you. This marvelous three-ring circus has won the plaudits of both the crowned and uncrowned heads of Europe as act follows act—each feat more dazzling than the one before it. Ladies, we now consider it a great honor to introduce:

Beautiful to the Eye— Pleasing to the Ear

There is a two-fold pleasure in the "pride of possession," if it is a Kranich & Bach Period Model—beauty and correctness of design and unmatchable tonal values . . . For the traditional skill of this 60-year-old house is just as evident in its Period Casings as in its superlative, unmatchable tone. Making it more than ever a piano to be treasured and enjoyed for generations.

RADIO IN EVERY ROOM

Pleasing guests is more important at Statler-operated hotels than making quick profits. That's why hundreds of thousands of dollars have just been spent to equip every one of the 7,700 Statler rooms—in six cities—for radio reception of superlative quality. Choice of two carefully selected programs always available—without charge. Plan your trip to be in a Statler over Sunday. You're sure of a pleasant week-end.

There are Statler Hotels in:

BOSTON · BUFFALO (Hotel Statler and Hotel Buffalo) · CLEVELAND · DETROIT · ST. LOUIS · NEW YORK (Hotel Pennsylvania, Statler-Operated)

Miller School

BROADWAY AT 112th STREET

Established 1894

This School has consistently maintained its ideals for the preparation of Bookkeepers, Secretaries, Stenographers, Typists and other office workers. It is an outstanding School that can be relied upon for the very best of instruction. Thousands of successful business men and women, many teachers and private secretaries readily testify to this fact.
